TINLEY WOMAN FLEECE BY KIN SHE TRUSTED

Mrs. Anna Clemmens, 60 years old, of Tinley Park suffered a terrible experience Monday of this week when she discovered that her nephew Charles G. Koepke of Chicago had deliberately defrauded her out of $11,000 her life savings by selling her that amount of fake mortgages after she had trusted him implicitly to invest the money in interest producing and sound securities.

Koepke, debonaire playboy, admitted using her life savings to keep up a front in night life places.

The 29 year old nephew had been nabbed in the apartment of a night club entertainer last week after he had deserted his wife, an expectant mother, and a child. His arrest followed the finding of a gas bill receipt of the entertainer found in his real estate office.

After Koepke's arrest last week Mrs. Clemmens became suspicious of the mortgages and she appeared at the state's attorney's office in Chicago Monday morning to confront her nephew with them. He was brought in from the county jail to face his aunt. When assistant state's attorney Charles S. Dougherty asked Koepke what he had done with the $11,000 Mrs. Clemmens had entrusted to him for investment, Koepke averted his face. Then he admitted he had used the money in night clubs and said: "I spent that too."

Upon hearing his admission of guilt, Mrs. Clemmens sobbed: "Oh Charlie, Charlie what have you done? Think of the disgrace you have brought on the family." Mrs. Clemmens stared as if unable to believe her ears, then fainted. Revived, she declared she would not have believed it "if Charlie hadn't told me to my face."

Mrs. Clemmens and her husband, William, 68, had been living on funds represented as interest which Koepke supplied them, the assistant state's attorney said.

Altho Koepke who maintained offices at 777 West Washington st. has confessed appropriating $40,000 to $50,000 of his client's funds, Monday's confession was the first he had made to issuing false mortgages.

Most of the money, Koepke has confessed, was spent on cabaret parties and to maintain a pretense of prosperity, while his business was becoming insolvent. During Monday three other persons visited the state's attorney's office to file new complaints against the broker.

They are: Julius Maus, 1914 South Jefferson street, who lost $2,000 on two spurious mortgages; Mrs. Rikka Benson, 4112 Addison street, who charges Koepke sold her two worthless mortgages last January for $3,000 and Miss Eva Casey, colored, an Idlewood, Michigan school teacher, who said she had turned over a $1,500 mortgage to Koepke for collection but failed to receive any money.

Prosecutor Dougherty disclosed that Koepke had changed his mind about wanting to plead guilty and "get it over with." The young broker who is under $25,000 bonds, is still in the county jail. Charges of operating a confidence game against Koepke were continued in the felony court until May 4.

Mrs. Clemmens did business with nephew's father for years and never had any trouble. She will testify against her nephew according to the assistant state's attorney who will seek an indictment against Koepke.

Work is well under way on the super-structure of the Texas Hall of State, showpiece of the Texas Centennial Exposition which opens at the earth speaking some 25 languages will furnish the characteristic atmosphere of each particular group and will supply merchandise, food, fun and entertainment to the millions of exposition visitors.

ORLAND FIRE DEPT. FIGHTS STUBBORN BLAZE

Fire supposedly from defective wires, destroyed a barn 150x40 feet a milk house and endangered all the buildings on the Klein farm east of Orland Park Monday afternoon. The farm is tenanted by Howard Beagley.

The fire broke out in the barn about 3 o'clock in the afternoon and fanned by a strong wind it gained very rapid headway. The Orland Park Fire Department was called and responded with their fire truck and chemicals. Upon arriving Fire Chief John Helenhouse saw that the barn was doomed so he directed his men to save the dwelling and other buildings. A grainery caught fire in five different places. A chicken house and cow barn also were on fire several times, but after a very hard fight the blaze was at last brought under control.

The wind shifted quite frequently and each time it did so some building was in the direct path of the flames. All the buildings were close together and the heat was so intense that the clothes of the firemen caught fire a number of times. No one was hurt however.

The neighbors gave excellent assistance to the firemen in fighting the stubborn blaze. Two cows, a calf, a horse and 25 tons of hay fell prey to the flames. The loss is estimated at about $6,000.

Fire Chief John Helenhouse of the Orland Park Fire Department wishes to express his appreciation and thanks to all those who helped him in fighting the fire.

Tinley Shows And Awards End

A tremendous crowd attended the last movie and weekly prize award sponsored by the Tinley Park Business Men's association at the Tinley Park School auditorium last Saturday night. Miss Lena Hollstein won the $10 award.

All business places report a wonderful business over the week-end.

The close of the weekly award feature has left the town without any activity for the time being, but other features are being considered. The public however, seems to be in favor of a continuation of the weekly award plan and if the reaction is strong enough in favor of it, it will probably be started up again.

The feature inaugurated last August has been instrumental in getting Tinley Park a place in the sun as business which formerly went to other towns was brought to Tinley Park and trade has been greatly stimulated by it. During the warm weather the awards were held out in the open in the depot square but when cold weather came the awards were made in the Tinley Park school auditorium. In order to create and hold the interest of the public talking movies were put out and proved a big success. A nominal admission fee was charged and the shows made enough money to pay expenses. At the close of the show last week a small surplus was left.

Other affairs the Tinley Park Business men have sponsored was the carnival last October and the big Christmas party which brought out nearly a thousand people.

Just wait for further announcements as to other activities which the Business Men have in view for this summer.

Will Receive Rubbish Bids

The village of Tinley Park is getting ready for its annual house cleaning and the village board will receive bids on May 4th for the hauling and disposal of the rubbish in Tinley Park. All bids must be in by the evening of May 4th.

Orland Farm Scenes In New Children's Book

The P. B. Hostert farm in Orland Township is in pictures now. No, not in the movies, but in a child's book entitled, "Fun At Happy Acres", written by Miss Ruth C. Barlow with pictures by Melvin Martinson.

The book is published by Thomas Y. Crowell Company, New York and has been approved by the First Lady of the Land, Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt.

The pictures used to illustrate the book were taken on the Hostert farm by Melvin Martinson, who as an amateur photographer, has exhibited pictures and taken prizes in international photographic salons in several countries. By profession, however, Mr. Martinson is a musician of some note, having played with the first violin section of the Chicago Symphony Orchestra for the past twenty years.

Ruth C. Barlow, the author of where, after high school, she had her "Fun At Happy Acres"—her first book, is chief of the children's department of the Flint, Michigan Public Library, which post she assumed in 1928. She was born in Chicago, early library training and experience Miss Barlow was a student at Knox College and at Western Reserve University where she took a special course for children's reading and is keenly alert to the needs in that field.

Miss Snodgrass made many friends in Tinley Park who are very sorry to learn of her untimely death.

Injured When Truck Upsets

Mrs. Bachara, wife of the operator of the Tinley Park mushroom factory was quite badly cut and bruised when the truck she was riding in going to Frankfort where she was to visit with relatives, upset on 183rd street a short distance west of the Y south of Tinley Park Monday night. The driver of the truck in trying to get the truck back on the pavement after the wheels had run off on the shoulder of the road, evidently turned the wheels too quick and the truck upset on its side. Mrs. Bachara was thrown out on the pavement and was knocked unconscious. She was cut by the broken glass from the cab. Dr. R. H. Carmichael of Tinley Park rendered first aid treatments.

Fellowship Club Card And Bunco

FIRE DESTROYS FRAME HOUSE NEAR NEW LENOX

Breaking out just as serving of the noon meal was to have started, fire originating from a defective chimney completely destroyed a two-story frame house on the farm of Ernest G. Oram, Jr., located on the Spencer road one mile south of New Lenox early Sunday afternoon.

Dinner was being prepared for members of the A. W. Dunn family, occupants of the home, when the fire was discovered shortly after 1 o'clock.

A hastily formed volunteer bucket brigade battled unsuccessfully to curb the flames, which quickly ate thru the seven room frame building. Loss on the house was placed at $5,000 by Mr. Oram, of which $3500 was covered by insurance. Loss in furniture and other contents could not be estimated.

Anticipating the arrival of a number of dinner guests from Joliet, Mr. Dunn had started a small fire in the furnace to warm the chill air in the house. Apparently sparks from the chimney settled on the roof and started the conflagration.

The fire was discovered by Mr. Dunn who had gone upstairs to change clothes after lighting the furnace. Smoke pouring into his bedroom windows alarmed Mr. Dunn. Investigating he found the roof a sheet of flame.

Water used by the bucket brigade was drawn from a pump which stood 18 feet from the house. When the fire neared its height, the terrific heat started the pump floor boards burning and made the iron piping so hot as to virtually render the pump useless.

Scores of neighbors hastened to the farm home to aid the Duns in pulling furniture from the burning house. They were able to save only a few of the first floor furnishings.

When the Duns' dinner guests arrived from Joliet they found the house a mass of flames.

A call to the Joliet department brought a Ford booster truck to the scene of the fire, but flames had gained such headway as to render combating futile.

BEDTIME STORY FOR CHILDREN

By THORNTON W. BURGESS

AN UNSEEN WATCHER

AS LIGHTFOOT the Deer and the big stranger from the Big Mountain fought in the little opening near the pond of Paddy the Beaver, neither knew or cared who saw them. Each was filled with rage and determined to drive the other from the Green Forest. Each was fighting for the right to win the love of Miss Daintyfoot.

Neither of them knew that Miss Daintyfoot herself was watching them. But she was. She had heard the clash of their great antlers as they had come together, and she had known exactly what it meant. Timidly she had stolen forward to a thicket where, safely hidden, she could watch that terrible fight. She knew that they were fighting for her. Of course. She knew it just as she had known how both had been hunting for her. What she didn't know for some time was which one she wanted to win that fight.

Both Lightfoot and the big stranger were handsome. Yes, indeed! They were very handsome! Lightfoot was just a little bit the bigger and, it seemed to her, just a little bit the handsomer. She almost wanted him to win. Then, when she saw how bravely the big stranger was fighting, and how well he was holding his own even though he was a little smaller than Lightfoot, she almost hoped he would win.

That great fight lasted a long time. To pretty Miss Daintyfoot it seemed that it never would end. But after a while Lightfoot's greater size and strength began to tell. Little by little the big stranger was forced back toward the edge of the open place. Now he would be thrown to his knees when Lightfoot wasn't. As Lightfoot saw this he seemed to gain new strength.

At last he caught the stranger in such a way that he threw him over. The stranger was beaten, and he knew it. The instant he succeeded in getting to his feet he turned tail and plunged for the shelter of the Green Forest. With a snort of triumph, Lightfoot plunged after him.

But now that he was beaten, fear took possession of the stranger. All desire to fight left him. His one thought was to get away, and fear gave him speed. Straight back toward the Great Mountain from which he had come, the stranger headed. Lightfoot followed only a short distance. He knew that that stranger was going for good and would not come back to the open place where they had fought. There he threw up his beautiful head, crowned by his great antlers, and whistled a challenge to all the Green Forest. As she looked at him, Miss

SPRINGTIME SUGGESTIONS

ARE your jellies and jams all gone from the fruit closet shelves? Just start in and make a few more. With bottled pectin jams, jellies, preserves can be made any day in the year. Use canned, dried or fresh fruit. This is a fine way of replenishing the well-stocked sweets in just a short half hour.

Before the oranges and citrus fruits are too high in price prepare plenty of orange marmalade for use all summer. The following is a most delicious citrus marmalade:

Amber Marmalade.

Slice one grapefruit, one orange and one lemon, removing all seeds. Slice very thin after washing the fruit well with a vegetable brush. Cover with three quarts of water and let stand overnight. In the morning put on to cook and cook until soft, but not as tender as the skin should be. Remove from the heat and when cool measure equal parts of sugar and add. Let stand overnight; in the morning cook down until a clear, thick marmalade is formed. Put into glasses, cover with paraffin and set away. This is not so bitter as the English marmalade and is a great favorite wherever it is tried.

Bottled Grape Juice Jelly.

Measure two cupfuls of grape juice and three cupfuls of sugar into a large saucepan, bring to a boil and stir in one-half cupful of pectin; again bring to full boil and boil one-half minute. Remove from the fire, let stand a minute, skim and pour quickly into glasses. What could be easier and more quickly done? This recipe makes five jelly glasses full.

Spring Conserve.

Cook one and one-half pounds of rhubarb, cut into one-inch pieces with three cupfuls of sugar, one package of dates, two tablespoonfuls of orange juice and one tablespoonful of grated orange rind; cook until thick, adding one-half cupful of broken nutmeats ten

BALANCED-MATCH PACK

TRICKS with borrowed items are always most convincing to the spectators. Such a trick is the balanced-match pack. All that you require is an ordinary pack of paper matches.

Setting the borrowed pack upon the table, you steady it in an upright position. Taking your hand away from the pack you leave the pack balanced, with its back toward the observers.

To conclude the trick, you pick up the pack, open the flap and show it to be quite ordinary.

In first receiving the pack, you perform a simple operation which makes the trick possible. You open the flap to make sure the pack is full of matches. Holding the back of the pack toward the spectators, you draw down one match as you close the flap.

This extended match, on the side unseen by the spectators, serves as a support when you balance the match pack.

NOT TOMORROW

By DOUGLAS MALLOCH

NOT tomorrow's deed, today's
Helps humanity to climb.
None may hope to walk the ways
Of tomorrow till its time—
Will not walk it even then
If he has been dreaming when Things today he had to do
Ere tomorrow came to view.

Not tomorrow's deed, today's
Needs our first attention now,
In the fruitful fields of maize,
Ere the harvest, first the plow.
First the furrow, then the row,
So today to-morrow grows;
No one reaps tomorrow's gain
Else today he sowed the grain.

Not tomorrow's deed, today's
Counts tomorrow, first of all.
Fair the future, if one lays
In the present first the wall.
Let us learn the lesson, son,
Finished things are first begun.
All our great to-morrows rest
On today's deed our best.

Washington Digest

National Topics Interpreted

National Press Building Washington, D. C.

Washington.—It has been several months since the administration farm relief program, the agricultural adjustment act, was declared dead, but like the words of the song, "the memory lingers on." And it is quite apparent that mistakes as well as memories of the AAA will continue through the heat of the coming Presidential campaign and probably considerably longer for it is only necessary to recall that the stepbrother of the AAA, the federal farm board of the Hoover administration, still is the butt of much criticism and many pointed paragraphs.

One of the main reasons why the memories linger on, where those memories involve AAA, is Michigan's Republican Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg. Senator Vandenberg never did get enthusiastic about the merits of AAA as they were expounded by Secretary Wallace, Administrator Chester Davis and other New Deal spokesmen and when the Supreme court of the United States threw out the processing taxes upon which the law was predicated, Senator Vandenberg was in a delightful spot from a political standpoint. He has not found it necessary to say "I told you so" and has had, I imagine, a great deal of personal fun in simply hinting to or reminding others of his previous stand.

But it was not until the Michigan senator began pulling figures out of his senatorial hat, showing how benefit payments from the AAA had gone to great and wealthy corporations in sums as high as a million dollars or more, that he held a key to the New Deal skeleton closet. They know now, however, exactly what he meant when he announced in the senate several weeks ago that no such plan as the AAA could be administered without vast sums being distributed in what he termed unwarranted payments—unwarranted from the standpoint of help for the smaller farmers.

Secretary Wallace stalled off Senator Vandenberg's demand in the senate for a complete list of beneficiaries who received checks from AAA in excess of one thousand dollars for quite a while but there were too many senators who believed as Senator Vandenberg did, that the truth ought to be known. Of course, as the procedure usually goes in Washington, many things are done without actual force being used. It was thus in the case of the AAA payments. Democratic senators who foresaw their inability to prevent a senate vote demanding a list of AAA payments persuaded Mr. Wallace to make public the list voluntarily and it was done just in advance of senate action. So, we now have for the first time, at least, an indication of the grotesque results of the agricultural adjustment administration program that was hailed from the Atlantic to the Pacific as an ideal plan.

The dynamite in the situation lies in the fact that there were dozens, even hundreds, of corporations which received AAA checks among the big bonanzas paid to induce curtailment of basic foreign crops. This would not be so bad except for the fact that the brilliant planners of the AAA continuously stressed its value to the small, debt ridden farmers. Throughout the time the law was under consideration and through the two years of its operation, never did Mr. Wallace or Mr. Davis fail to point out in their numerous speeches how great sums of money, collected in processing taxes, were being distributed to thousands of farmers and that these payments were in time going to put agriculture on its collective feet.

Now, however, the truth of their statements has been proved but when the whole truth had been exposed on the floor of the senate, it was found to go far beyond the small, debt ridden farmers.

The whole truth disclosed, in fact, that several million dollars had been paid even to corporations chartered by the British government and with home offices in England. Wall Street, that home of "entrenched greed," received its share and its share was substantial. On top of all of this there lately has come a disclosure that a great wheat farmer in Montana received something like $50,000 for agreeing not to plant wheat on land which he had rented from the Indians through the Federal Department of the Interior for the specific purpose of raising wheat.

The list of huge benefit payments is much too large to include in this letter but the fact remains that it showed how even the best laid plans of mice and men oft go astray, even when those men are brilliant brain trusters who themselves claim to know all there is available for human understanding. Beyond that, the Vandenberg disclosures have set in motion discussion that will come pretty close to continuing into every farmhouse in the land. Unless I miss my guess, and I am no Doctor Tugwell, thousands of farmers are going to bitterly resent the fact that their payments were small, whereas gigantic corporations received sums ranging from ten to a thousand times as large.

In behalf of the AAA officials, it must be said that there will be as, indeed, there has been already, considerable unfair criticism. The criticism to which I refer is of this type: that they should have discovered in advance of the payments that funds were going to these corporations. Assuming that they could have discovered that fact in advance, there was no alternative for them except to pay the checks authorized by law. Congress made the law, or rather congress passed it under the lash of the administration, but it was on the statute books and administrative officials are not supposed to disregard such provisions.

If there is to be criticism it should be directed at the initial framing of the statute that brought about the condition. The results that have attracted so much attention since Senator Vandenberg's exposure constitute one of the curious coincidences and queer quirks of planned economy.

And a further word about the criticism. A great many people are likely to forget that while their check was in three figures and some corporation received one in six figures, the condition results wholly from the fact that one owned more land than the other. You may properly say this should have been foreseen and I believe you will be making a correct statement. But surely this is a fact: the AAA officials cannot be blamed for sending out the checks when the law said they should do it regardless of the name or nature of the beneficiary. The fault lies solely and completely with those who, from their professional desks, conceived the whole scheme and gained President Roosevelt's approval for it.

Development of the vulnerable spots in the AAA crop curtailment program probably will prove beneficial to the country as a whole eventually. For one thing, these disclosures have forever choked off proposals of that kind. They may result as well in strengthening the new proposition for crop control through the medium of soil conservation. In other words, since the bulk of the congress thinks through legislation only in the terms of administration arguments, they will likely be less prone to enact legislation without knowing what results will be obtained.

It seems to me that the new farm-aid plan likely will be stronger and probably more workable and certainly less extravagant than was the AAA because the AAA weaknesses have been exposed. These exposures ought to have an effect also among thinking farmers who hereafter are unlikely to accept dogmatic statements and rainbow pictures painted for them by political demagogues and professional farm leaders without examining the practicability of the scheme. Personally, I am convinced that a great many farmers were led to believe that AAA was their only salvation and they gained this conviction solely because the other side never was told to them.

While we are talking about mistakes and about the results obtained by brilliant theorists, I hear more and more discussion of the latest move by Chairman Henry P. Fletcher and his Republican national committee. Mr. Fletcher has hired ten university professors to head up what he calls the committee's research staff and in announcing their appointment he stressed a declaration that "the division is not a brain trust." But "brain trust" it is going to be called notwithstanding Mr. Fletcher's assertion that they were practical men and women of experience. They are going to be a brain trust in exactly the same sense that Mr. Roosevelt's "brain trust" has been denominated. And how else could it be? There actually seems to be little choice between the type of men Mr. Fletcher has chosen and the Tugwells, Hopkinses and other doctors and professors who have constantly had the ear of the President. These men will have Mr. Fletcher's ear and undoubtedly will pour into their own theories of government and their own ideas of approach to the problem that confronts the Republican national committee, namely, the defeat of Mr. Roosevelt.

I have observed political battles for a good many years and I have observed the management of governmental responsibilities through a parallel period. The conclusion is inescapable, as far as I am concerned, that practical men always have done a better job, always have been better administrators and better planners, than the men and women who have spent their lives lecturing from a university classroom rostrum. I once criticized Professor Tugwell by saying that his qualification for the post of under-secretary of agriculture consisted of tending flowers in a window box and I am wondering now whether Mr. Fletcher's new brain trust is any better equipped for its job. However, we must not forget, the country now has one brain trust trying to find out what is wrong with another brain trust.

Development of the vulnerable spots in the AAA crop curtailment program probably will prove beneficial to the country as a whole eventually. For one thing, these disclosures have forever choked off proposals of that kind. They may result as well in strengthening the new proposition for crop control through the medium of soil conservation. In other words, since the bulk of the congress thinks through legislation only in the terms of administration arguments, they will likely be less prone to enact legislation without knowing what results will be obtained.

It seems to me that the new farm-aid plan likely will be stronger and probably more workable and certainly less extravagant than was the AAA because the AAA weaknesses have been exposed. TALL TALES

As Told to:
FRANK E. HAGAN and ELMO SCOTT WATSON

Battle of the Rattlers
FEATS of strength almost legendary, though their hero is very much alive, are heard in the Cumberland mountains of Preston Brooks, Sewanee, Tenn.

"Buck," as Preston is best known, drove a light automobile. It negotiated mountain trails easily despite a weakness for punctures. As frequently as tires went flat Buck would jerk away the offender, repair and replace it, all without bothering to jack up the wheel. "Puncture disease annoyed me only once," Buck stated, explaining a fortnight's absence. "My last repair patch was lost, six days ago, in an isolated cove that is twenty-seven and one-half miles from anywhere."

"I got stubborn. Decided to stay there indefinitely. Finally, near starved, I headed for home, flat tire and all. 'Don't believe I could have held out if I hadn't steered into a wild cow, down on the mountainside. The flivver hit the cow plumb center and boosted her into the air. Before she landed, I'd milked and stripped her dry. Did it with my left hand, too, scooping the milk into my mouth with the right."

"When I turned the cow out to graze again only one tire had air in it. A rattlesnake attacked me and I jerked off the tire, air and all, and fenced with the snake. His hollow fangs pierced the innertube but I held on and as the tire flattened, the snake swelled. He exploded, finally, and I came home. And here I am!"

The Flying Pond

NEAR Buffalo, N. Y., lives a farmer who once had a pond back of his barn but he doesn't have it now. George H. Schlicker tells the reason thus: One evening last winter the farmer saw a flock of wild geese settle down on his pond. He ran for his shotgun but before he arrived at the pond it was too dark to see the geese plainly enough to shoot one. So he decided to wait until morning to try to bag a goose.

That night there was a sudden drop in the temperature. In the cold frosty dawn the farmer hurried out to the barn and peered around the corner. Sure enough, there were the geese sitting quietly out in the middle of the pond. He stepped out into the open and raised his weapon. Immediately the geese set up a terrific clamor. The next moment their thrashing wings were carrying them high into the air and with them went the farmer's pond—frozen solidly to their legs.

Citizens of northern New York now look forward with dread to the coming of every winter. They are afraid that a large flock of wild geese may some time alight on Lake Ontario, that a sudden change will freeze it to the legs of the big birds and that they will lose their lake just as the farmer lost his pond. Residents of northern Ohio are also said to be alarmed over the possibility that the same thing may happen to Lake Erie.

Clothes and the Man

WHEN Walter Howey and Frank Carson, widely known newspaper executives, "teamed" on the Chicago Herald and Examiner years ago, their after-business adventures made history.

At five minutes past three one morning they strolled happily on Randolph street, having been persuaded to participate in a game of chance and profiting handsomely thereby.

At Clark street a ragged stranger approached. Instantly, Howey peeled $20 from his roll and showed it to the derelict.

"This is yours," orated Howey. "Just remove your clothes. Cross the street and touch the county building."

The unfortunate hesitated. He was lost. Stepping gingerly, he removed all but b. v. d.'s, appraised the apparently deserted streets, and weakened. Howey pressed the money into his hand. "Take it," said the editor. "All you gotta do is touch the building."

As the victim, grabbing the $20, reached the county building, Carson yelled for the police. One of Chicago's finest appeared magically. "Catch him," screamed Carson, pointing. "That fellow's crazy!"

Nine seconds later the naked man, clutching $20 tightly, turned a corner in advance of the policeman, firing wildly. "Think of it," gasped Carson. "More money than he's seen in months, but naked. And not even a pawnshop open."

The sequel, heard infrequently, is when Carson arrived home an hour later his apartment was jimmied. A complete outfit of clothing was missing. Costlier objects were untouched.

Foods Deteriorate
In general, foods deteriorate on aging with varying intensity. This is manifested by such visible conditions as mold, rot and loss of moisture which is concomitant with a hardening effect. Many times, however, this deterioration can only be detected by the change in aroma and flavor, as with butter and eggs, and coffee belongs to this class. One of the greatest causes for spoilage in foods is the presence of oxygen. This gas is instrumental in changing some of the various constituents of foods which have an affinity for it and thereby alters the flavor of the entire food. The chemical composition of the roasted coffee bean is such that it is very easily attacked by oxygen.

Indian Snake Charmer Uses a Mysterious Poison Herb

Kurbad Ali, an Indian, has a contract with a medical institute to supply them with cobras, the poison of which is used for experiments. To secure his victims he employs a mysterious herb used from time immemorial by Indian snake charmers. The herb exudes an odor which does not affect human beings, but temporarily stupefies snakes, rendering them harmless.

Tinley Park Garden Club

In April

Oh, once again the hosts of Spring
Are marching through the world,
With all their shining panoply
And colored flags unfurled.

There is no sound of moving feet,
Save when, through vale and plain,
We hear the silver soldiers glide,
Long regiments of rain.

The Tinley Park Garden club met at the home of Mrs. R. Hug on Thursday, April 16 Mrs. Dorke entertaining. Routine business was taken care of with reports of the chairman. Mrs. J. C. Funk read an article on conservation. Mrs. Alice Anderson resigned as program chairman and Mrs. Swisher will be the new program chairman. Mrs. Swisher writes as follows:

"In response to a request from our program chairman, each lady attending the meeting brought a short poem about a flower, of her own choosing. The chairman then placed a large poster on the wall with the stem and leaves of a hyacinth drawn on it. In place of the bloom all that could be seen were tiny numerals. Next each member was given a wee flowerette on the back of which was a number to correspond with one on the poster. The ceremony of placing these in just the right spot, with the reading of the many beautiful poems was intensely interesting and uplifting. When all were assembled there was before us a gorgeous flower in beautiful pastel colors. This was called the "Poets Boquet" the symbolism of which was as follows: No one is perfect, but in the life of each individual there is something fine and beautiful. It is the coming together of all of these beauties that produces the splendid fellowship found in our Garden club where each member puts forth her best, just as the combining of the flowerettes made a beautiful and perfect bloom.

The hostess served delicious tea, cookies, candy and nuts. There were twenty-two members and two guests present.

The next meeting will be held in the home of Mrs. Adele Marquardt Thursday May 21.

Everybody wishes to see the Cole Bros.-Clyde Beatty Circus this year, which last year returned from a triumphal five year tour of Europe, and it is a foregone conclusion that the world's largest tent, seating 10,000 persons, will be filled to the last chair afternoon and night. Six rings and stages and the hippodrome track, to say nothing of the vast aerial maze for the earth's foremost arenic talent—400 acknowledged kings and queens of daring, grace, skill and incredible agility. Sixty clowns will project ten times that number of mirth waves. Countless new foreign features and innovations new to America are introduced on the gigantic program of the world's greatest amusement institution. Clyde Beatty's gigantic trained animal exhibition will be presented in the main performance.

Throughout circus day the three gigantic tented stables of the Cole Bros.-Clyde Beatty organization will be open to the public free of charge. Here lovers of fine horses may view at random hundreds of the world's most beautiful thoroughbreds. Perfect specimens of almost every known strain will be found in the big show's great free horse fair which also includes a congress of tiny Shetland ponies to delight the little folks.

Doors to the big show and the menagerie will be open at 1 and 7 p. m. The big shows start at 2 and 8 p. m.

ORLAND PARK

The Collins property east of Orland Park along 143rd street and Keane avenue is being surveyed and leveled off for subdivision purposes. Two modern homes, one costing about $4,500, the other about $5,000 are to be built this spring. John Habenicht has the contract for leveling the land. Roy Loebe of Orland Park has been in charge of the survey work.

Sunday a grass fire in the forest preserve burned up to the Gee filling station and cabins but was put out before any serious damage was done.

Another fire further back in the forest preserve was fought by boys from the CCC camp in Palos Park.

Mr. Cowan was able to resume his duties Tuesday morning.

Joseph Hennings is quite ill with an attack of scarlet fever.

Question Box On Soil Conservation

To assist in providing accurate information on the new soil conservation program and how it will affect farmers in Will county, this paper is publishing some of the more common questions together with the answers given by the extension service, College of Agriculture, University of Illinois and Farm Advisor Leonard W. Braham.

Q.—Can a crop be harvested from land devoted to a soil-conserving crop in 1936, such as second-year clover, timothy or redtop?

A.—Second-year clover, timothy or redtop may be pastured, harvested for hay or harvested for seed and still qualify as a soil-conserving crop.

Q.—How will Class 1 and 2 payments be divided between landlord and tenant?

A.—If the land is rented for cash or commodity payment all of the Class 1 and 2 payments will be made to the tenant, providing they are justified by the performance of the tenant, regardless of any contribution made by the landlord toward such performance. In the case of crop share or stock share lease, both Class 1 and 2 payments will be divided between landlord and tenant in the same way as the principal soil-depleting crop or crop proceeds are divided under their lease or operating agreement.

Q.—Is it necessary to make new seedings to qualify for Class 1 payments?

A.—In some cases new seedings may not be necessary. Second-year clover carried over will qualify provided these acres represent a decrease in soil-depleting acreage from the 1935 base.

Q.—If a farmer owns and operates one tract of land and rents another tract on the shares, can he qualify for payment on his own land and leave the other out?

A.—The farmer's performance will be checked on both tracts and payments will be based on net performance on the two tracts. All tracts owned, operated or controlled by one person in a given association form the unit used for determining performance for payment.

Q.—Can soybeans be pastured instead of being plowed under and be considered as a soil-building and soil-conserving crop?

A.—Soybeans can be considered as a soil-building and soil-conserving crop only when turned under green without any pasturing whatever.

Q.—What acres may be used in determining the amount for which a farmer is eligible to receive as Class 2 payments if earned?

A.—Only those acres of the farm classed as crop land which are devoted to soil-conserving or soil-building crops from which no soil-depleting crop is harvested in 1936 are included in the acreage to be multiplied by one dollar to determine the maximum Class 2 payment.

Letters To The Editor

Editor News-Bulletin:

"Birth certificates were not kept before 1881 in New York state, and I think that New York state was about the first state to adopt that system. Yet this state demands that we have a birth certificate."

A criminal who robs a store is allowed to take his oath that he is not guilty, but old-aged men and women who have lived honest lives and performed their duties to country, state and their fellow man, their word is not to be taken under oath. We are placed lower than the lowest criminal.

I was fortunate that I served my state in the militia, but I have friends who are not so situated. It makes me angry at the num-skulls who make our laws at Springfield, Democrat or Republican. They fight for Party and not for us old men and women who are in need.

Broken Bones Are Numerous

Approximately a million people in the United States have at least one bone broken in the course of a year.

CANNED FOODS ARE GOOD

And Scientists Strive To Make Them Better At Big National Convention

IF ANYONE has failed to realize, in this day of the universal eating of canned foods, that the canning industry of the United States works incessantly to promote and protect public health and to improve the quality of canned products, he would be convinced of that fact if he attended the Twenty-ninth Annual Convention of the National Canners Association.

When eight thousand canners and others interested in the canning industry gathered at Chicago this year they made a lot of speeches on a great variety of subjects. But of the more than forty addresses delivered, over thirty were delivered by known and accredited scientists and economists who are devoting their lives to problems of food production, health and proper nutrition. These men spoke on many aspects not only of the canning process itself but of the actual raising of the crops which are especially planted for canning—all the way from the selection of the seed and the right soil to the control of the insect pests which attack them.

The United States Government was represented in this group of scientists. Great universities sent experts. The laboratories of the can manufacturing companies contributed their quota, and there were many from the laboratories of the National Canners Association itself.

Uncle Sam Represented

The United States Government scientists who spoke included Glenn Smith of the United States Department of Agriculture and Purdue Experiment Station at Lafayette, Ind., M. W. Baker, Associate Marketing Specialist of the United States Bureau of Agricultural Economics at Columbus, Ohio, and J. E. Barr of the same government bureau. C. B. Sayre of the New York State Agricultural Experiment Station at Geneva, N. Y., was also one of the speakers.

The scientists from big universities were G. M. Dack of the University of Chicago, G. W. Keitt of the College of Agriculture of the University of Wisconsin at Madison, Wis., and J. C. Walker of the same university.

Can Manufacturers Contribute

The scientists in the employ of big manufacturers of cans, who can no foods but simply supply containers, included W. M. Martin, F. W. Geise, L. G. Werner, R. Royce and E. W. Blair of the Research Division of the American Can Company at Maywood, Ill., and William H. Harrison, Director, A. E. Stevenson and G. V. Hallman of the Research Department of the Continental Can Company at Chicago.

Finally the scientists in the employ of the National Canners Association itself were E. F. Kohman, E. J. Cameron, C. A. Greenleaf and H. R. Smith of its research laboratories in Washington, D. C.; C. E. Lachele and J. Russell Eddy of its Western Branch research laboratory in San Francisco, Calif.; and C. G. Woodbury, director of the Association's Raw Products Research Bureau.

The Public Be Pleased

Some of these scientists spoke not once but several times and the purpose of every speech was to help the canners maintain their high standards and improve their methods of canning still further so that the public may be assured not only of the absolute wholesomeness of canned foods but that it may enjoy them more and more. In order to be sure of pleasing the public many women nutritionists and home economics experts were called upon to give their views. These included editors of women's magazines and newspapers, home economics and nutrition experts, representatives of women's clubs interested in this subject and even a woman who has been foreign trade commissioner in Oslo, Norway.

Among them were Alice Blinn of the Ladies' Home Journal, Dorothy Marsh of Good House-keeping, Sarah Field Splint, Ada Bessie Swan and Mrs. Nell B. Nichols of Woman's Home Companion, Faye Hamilton of McCall's Magazine, Mrs. Ida Migliario of Household Searchlight, Ellen Pennell of Successful Farming, Mrs. Frances T. Northcross of the Washington Herald, Mrs. Edith Shuck of the Chicago News, Mrs. Henry Hardy, Chairman of the Cook County Federation of Women's Clubs, Virginia Porter of Libby, McNeill & Libby, Dr. Lillian B. Storms, Director of Nutrition of the Gerber Products Co., Gudrun Carlson, Assistant United States Trade Commissioner to Norway for five years, and Ruth Atwater and Marjorie H. Black of the National Canners Association.

Mrs. O. Ebenhack Again Heads Tinley Woman's Club

Miss Shirley Anderson played, "The Raindrop Prelude" and it was very easy to imagine the rain and storm as she depicted it on the piano keys. Miss Jane DeVol played in an excellent manner and showed her control of the keys and touch when she played "Three Dances of Henry The Eighth." Eleanor Stoltenberg, came from Chicago, and played from memory, without a mistake, a lovely waltz with a teasing rhythm.

It was decided to hold the Spring Luncheon in the latter part of May and Mrs. F. Baldwin, Mrs. R. Hug and Mrs. Wm. Funk were appointed as a committee to locate a place to have it.

At the election of officers, the following were chosen to serve: Mrs. Omar Ebenhack was re-elected as president; Mrs. Chas. Crist, first vice president; Mrs. Roy Hannum, 2nd vice president; Mrs. Delcia Murphy, secretary; Mrs. August Mesenbrink, treasurer; Mrs. Albert Koehler, Dean; Mrs. Chas. Nielsen and Mrs. Wm. Semmler, delegates and Mrs. F. Baldwin and Mrs. J. C. Funk as alternate delegates.

Mrs. Hug was chairman of the nominating committee.

All were very happy to have Mrs. Henry Wyman with us as she had been ill all winter and this was the first meeting for many months she has been able to attend. Mrs. Wyman gave her report as treasurer and showed a nice balance in the bank.

It was decided to raise the club dues to one dollar a year.

The state convention of the Illinois Federation of Women's clubs will be held in the Sherman hotel May 18, 19, 20 and 21. As many members as possible should try to attend at least one day of the convention.

Frankfort-New Lenox 4H Club Present Program

The Frankfort - New Lenox 4H Livestock and the Frankfort 4H Clothing club presented the entire program and served the refreshments at the unit meeting of the Farm Bureau on April 17 at Mokena. A Farm bureau meeting is held monthly at this place except in summer. Parents of 4H members were chosen for the committee on this special occasion. Mr. Frances, leader of the Livestock club was chairman and Mrs. Eisenbrandt, leader of the Clothing club was assistant chairman. The program prepared was as follows.

The 4H orchestra, composed of several members from each club and led by Mr. Lawrence Kohl, opened the meeting with two selections. The 4H clubs then sang "4H Will Shine Tonight" and "4H Clubs". Immediately after this the presidents from both clubs led in repeating the 4H pledge. Dorothea Eisenbrandt then spoke on "What the 4H's Stand For". Howard Strassenberg followed with a speech "Why I Joined and Have Continued 4H Club Work." A demonstration with a live 850 pound Angus calf was given by its owner Fred Frances, Jr., and his teammate Lewis Ebert. Betty Marti then recited the poem, "Wanted a Girl." Another demonstration on "Judging Dresses" was given by Dorothy Elsner and Ruby Heisner. Wilbert Lauffer then spoke on "Keeping Production Records." Mr. Frances introduced Helen Bitterman, Illinois State Champion of Clothing, who spoke on the radio Saturday, April 18, and who was a member of the National Congress. A demonstration act "Starting an Old Model T Ford" was given by several members of the livestock club. Mr. Braham, Will County Farm Bureau Advisor, spoke on "4H Clubs". A play "Winning Pa" was given, members from both clubs taking part. The closing song by both clubs was "Follow the Gleam."

Refreshments were served by the 4H members. Mr. Nickolson led in games and the evening was concluded.

SYNOPSIS

The Duke, Barry Gilbert, likable youth of twenty-three, jobless and broke, enters an unoccupied summer home in Southampton, seeking shelter from a storm. He makes himself at home, dozing at the fireplace, he is startled by the arrival of a butler, Willetts; and a chauffeur, Evans. He learns that the son of the owner of the house, Jack Ridder, whom the servants had never seen, is expected. He decides to bluff it out. His supposed parents have left for Germany. Next morning he is given a letter for his "mother." He opens it and finds a message from the real Jack, saying he could not come, and returning a hundred-dollar bill. The boy's father had pensioned him into obscurity. Barry pockets the money, intending to return it later. He orders Evans to take him to Montauk, intending to disappear there. On the way he meets Judge Hambidge and his daughter, Patricia. Believing he is Jack Ridder, she invites him to dinner the following Tuesday. Barry returns to Southampton, deciding to stay a bit longer. Mr. Ridder, Sr., through his newspaper, the Globe, accuses Judge Hambidge of taking orders from Tammany Hall in a condemnation proceeding. Barry meets Peter Winslow, prominent attorney. Winslow tells Barry that Judge Hambidge had seen an accident in which a woman was killed by a taxicab. At home Barry finds the wife of the real Jack Ridder awaiting him. Her husband is in jail in New York, charged with the murder of Mike Kelly, Tammany boss. The girl, Peggy, tells Barry how she had met Jack in Florida and married him, as Jay Rogers. Jack lost his job, and they went to New York, where she got work at the Cocoanut Bar. There she was accused of trying to pick the pocket of Mike Kelly, and was arrested. Her husband went to Kelly's to induce him to drop the charge. Later Kelly was found dead, his skull crushed by a decanter.

"That was a lucky break for you, because, if he'd been here, he'd've had you chucked right out of the front door. Think, kid! He hasn't spoken to his son for years. Paid him fifty dollars a week not to use the family name. And then a cabaret girl turns up to say she's married the boy, and he committed murder—or was accused of it—because somebody caught her picking pockets in a night-club."

"It doesn't sound good—the way you put it."

"That's nothing to the way he'd put it. But he's not here. And that's not the best of your luck. The best of your luck is that I am."

"Why?"

"Because I can help you, and I'm going to. I am—if you'll let me. If you'll let me go on being John Clarke Ridder, Jr."

"Oh, that's the game, is it?"

"Listen, John Clarke Ridder, fake, can be the best friend John Clarke Ridder, real, ever had in his life. I can get Winslow to take your case, if he don't know I'm a fake. I can get Judge Hambidge to use his influence, and that's plenty. I can get money from home, because I'm making good. Look—read that!"

He darted across the room, and to the table drawer, returning with the letter from Mrs. Ridder.

"Read it quick! Any shock might prove serious. He must change his will." And he still reads the papers. All right. What if he does read about a bum, named Jay Rogers, that married a night-club girl and is on trial for killing a Tammany boss. Jay Rogers don't mean a thing. But, if he reads that John Clarke Ridder, Jr., did all this, on top of everything else he's done, what's the answer?"

"What's the answer if he don't?"

"The answer then is that a noble young fellow, named John Clarke Ridder—and that's me—gets a whole lot interested in an unfortunate guy named Jay Rogers. Why? Because he believes him to be innocent—that's why. And, don't make any mistake, a guy like Ridder believing it's going to start a lot of other people believing it, too. I write my mother that I've got to have money to carry on the fight, and I get it, because the old man decides I can't be so bad, after all. Maybe he gets his newspaper into the scrap—not for his own son, which wouldn't help much, but for a stranger. Whether that happens or not, I'll get a job and a lawyer, and use 'em both for you. I'll use all the family influence for you. And, when it's over, and your husband's acquitted, I'll be in some position to talk to the old man for you."

"What if he isn't acquitted?"

"You've got to face that chance, either way."

Peggy looked at him with hard eyes.

"You're a pretty smart fellow," she said. "Pretty smart—if you can talk me into keeping my mouth shut while you get the money, and the position, and everything my husband ought to have."

"Will he get it if I don't? Use your nut, Peggy. What do I gain? If you spill the beans tonight, what good does it do you? And what harm does it do me? Maybe I go to jail for a few weeks. But it don't get your husband out of jail, does it? This way, night, and it's the only way. Think it over."

"Will you answer me one question?" the girl asked.

"Shoot."

"If you've nothing to gain, why are you doing this?"

The Duke had been pacing the room. He stopped short now, and his clenched hands fell limp at his sides.

"Dammed if I know," he responded. "And that's the truth."

They could hear the clock ticking in the hall.

"All right," Peggy said, at last. "I'm going to play it your way. Where do we go from here?"

"I think you'd better go to bed," the Duke answered.

"Here?"

"Why not?" grinned the Duke.

"You've got a whole lot more right here than I have. There's a guest-room that Willetts always keeps ready."

The girl hesitated.

"What time can I get back to New York?" she asked.

"There's a good train around nine o'clock."

"All right."

Barry opened a door the other side of the library, and switched on the lights. "There you are," he said.

"All right."

"It just struck me," he remarked.

"You don't suppose your husband might have given his real name?"

"No. But that's one reason I want to get back. You better come with me, too. I think you're on the level, but I'm not so sure Jack's going to think so."

"O. K.," Barry assented. "Breakfast at eight. Good night, Mrs. Rogers."

"Good night, Mr. Ridder."

She smiled, a wan ghost of a smile.

Standing before the dying fire, Barry exclaimed: "What a damned fool I am!" and stuffed the letter into his pocket.

The newspaper lay before him, and, with it, he came back to the hearth. "Let's see what it's all about," he said.

The story filled the first page, and overflowed onto the second and third.

Judge Hambidge's eagerly-awaited decision was crowded into an upper corner of the fourth page, with a two-column picture of the Judge. There was no editorial comment. Evidently, there hadn't been time for that yet.

"For some unexplained reason," the paper said, "the murder was not reported to the police until nearly noon."

The body had been found by the Filipino servant shortly after eight that morning. Mike Kelly's skull had been fractured by a single blow with a heavy cut-glass whiskey decanter that lay close by, its contents still undisturbed. There was no sign of a struggle.

The Filipino boy's yarn was straight enough. Kelly had come home just before eleven o'clock. He was a little drunk, the boy admitted. He had let himself in with his latch-key, and gone straight to the dining room, where he rang violently. The boy had responded, and got out the liquor and the glasses. Then a young man had called. His name was Rogers, the boy remembered, and he said he had known Kelly in Palm Beach. Kelly had said, "All right; show him into the drawing room," and the boy had done so, and brought in the tray. Then he had gone back downstairs to the servants' quarters.

A little while later, he had heard angry voices in the drawing room, and had listened outside, in the hall. What he had heard was pretty much what the girl had repeated, but there were a few additions, in the way of threats from the visitor. The Filipino decided that it was none of his business, and returned to his room. Ten minutes later, anxious in spite of himself, he remounted the back stairs. As he reached the top, he heard the drawing room door closed noisily, and saw the caller hurry into the hall and through the front door, which he banged after him. It was then nearly midnight. The Filipino had been on duty since seven that morning, and, reassured, he tiptoed down the stairs, and went to bed. That was all he knew until, eight hours later, he came upon Mike Kelly's body lying face-down on the floor.

The Duke was just about to go to bed himself, when he noticed a small headline. "Artist's Wife Crushed by Taxi." That would be the accident that upset Judge Hambidge.

"I might talk to Winslow at the Hambidges," he thought, sleepily. "But I guess Peggy's right. Better see Jack first. I've got a date with Winslow at his office on Monday."

The hall clock struck three.

Nevertheless, the Duke was up an hour before breakfast.

He shaved, and bathed, and tossed a few things into an over-night bag he'd seen in the closet. Emerging, he ran into Willetts.

"Breakfast for two," the Duke ordered. "Mrs. Rogers and I are taking the 9:27 to New York."

He thought the butler looked at him sharply.

As their train left Southampton, Peggy looked even shabbier in her cheap black dress and her little red beret. Her face was very white, for want of make-up or sleep. "It's funny," she said, awkwardly, "but I sort of feel that everything's going to be all right now."

"Why don't you and the boy move out here?"

"To stay, you mean?"

"Sure. I can square it with Willetts. Come along, the end of the week, Peggy. After all, it's where you belong, you know."

"I belong with Jack," she said. "And, anyway, has it struck you that the old man might come back unexpected? He's been mad six years. What's he going to do when he finds out about all this?"

"Well," Barry hazarded, "if we've got his son out—"

"He won't care," Peggy interrupted, her voice again hard and pitiful. "He never did."

"He smashed Jack's fiddle. Jack wanted to be a violinist. He could've been, too. But the old man found he was taking lessons. 'I don't want any jazz-banders in my family,' he snorted. 'You're going to take my place when I die.'

"That started it. He'd always been hard on Jack. Bossy, the old man is. And you can't boss Jack. He got an other fiddle. He was good on it, too. When he went up to Harvard, he used to play it at parties."

"When his father heard about that, he threatened to cut off Jack's allowance. So Jack stopped fiddling, and began to drink. And, one night when he was awful drunk, he wrote the old man's name on a check. He tried to get it back the next day, but the bank had turned it down, and the guy he'd given it to was sore, and had Jack arrested."

"Jack had sold his second fiddle to make good. He never got another one. The old man cut Jack loose. He came up to Boston, with a newspaper that printed the story in his hands. Cold as ice, he was. 'You've disgraced me,' he said, and 'you'll go on disgracing me, if I'll let you. I won't. You can go where you like and do what you please, but not with my name. If you ever use that again, you can starve.'

Peggy turned to the window.

Then, abruptly, "How are we going to get in to see him?" she asked.

"You're his wife," Barry answered.

"And you?"

"I'm his friend. And my name's Ridder."

Even Peggy's story didn't quite prepare the Duke for that meeting with his other self.

He'd rather expected to see one of those weaklings who find the world a vast conspiracy against them.

John Clarke Ridder, Jr., proved to be merely a frightened youngster. A slim, rather frail lad in his early twenties, with soft, dark hair, and large, dark eyes, and a peculiarly sensitive mouth. His hands were soft and sensitive, too, but there was nothing effeminate about the boy. "Gee, I'm glad to see you, Peg," he blurted. "I was getting a little bit worried."

Peggy's presence reassured him. Evidently, he counted on her, and felt safe while she was with him.

"Jack," she said, quietly and significantly. "I've brought your friend, Mr. Ridder. He's going to help us."

"That's great," he observed.

Fortunately for them, the guard had other things on his mind. He kept disappearing, and coming back, and looking away from them to a paper that someone had given him, and that seemed irritating. In a low voice, Peg outlined what had happened, and the conclusion that had been reached.

The boy turned to Barry.

Young, frightened, and soft, he could reason quickly, and talk straight.

"I don't understand," he said to the Duke. "If these people will do things for you, because they think you're Jack Ridder, why won't they do 'em for me, when they know I'm Jack Ridder?"

"Because they like me. They've never met you. And because my record's clear. I'm not accused of murder under circumstances that—well, they don't sound pretty, at first, do they?"

"They do not."

"And, of course, there's your mother."

The sensitive mouth tightened.

Barry gave him the letter he had shown Peggy.

The lad read it.

"The old man's got her buffaloed," he remarked; "same as he's got everybody else. O. K. I wouldn't have used my own name, anyway. Letting you use it's another thing, but Peggy thinks you're straight, and she's never been wrong yet. It's a queer game, but I'll sit in. What next?"

Quickly He Mapped Out His Plan.

Barry was relieved. The guard had been showing his paper to a colleague.

Quickly, he mapped out his plans—so far as he had any. "I've got a date with Peter Winslow on Monday. And I'm going to cable your mother—for money. We've got to have that. I hope to get a job pretty soon, and make my own way, but, just now, there's less than a hundred and fifty dollars in the kitty, and I'm going to give most of that to Peggy for current expenses. You'd better write your mother, too—the kind of letter you'd write in answer to that, if you were in my shoes. I'll bring you the stationery, and, of course, I'll mail your letter from Southampton. We'll have to smuggle it out of here, I suppose. Now, tell me exactly what happened the night before last."

The story differed very little from the one Barry had heard, but it was full of shrewd questions that hadn't occurred to him.

Poultry

CAN'T STINT CHICKS IF PROFIT EXPECTED

Baby Chick Is Delicate Piece of Mechanism.

By Roy C. Dearstyne, Poultry Department, North Carolina State College, WNU Service.

The old copy book adage, "Do it right or not at all," applies particularly to chick-rearing where a later profit is expected. The baby chick is a delicate piece of mechanism that has definite requirements if best results are to be secured.

The object in chick rearing is a short, intensive period of rapid but normal development for about ten weeks, and then a gradual tapering off process in which the bird is not forced to a great extent, but is allowed to build up a large frame and constitutional vigor capable of carrying over the bird through a heavy, uninterrupted laying season. If the baby chick is to be properly developed, it must have a carefully balanced ration, the right environment and good living conditions.

It is evident in North Carolina that many hundred farm owners are expecting poultry to furnish them with cash this season. Many have begun their chick rearing with an optimistic point of view only to learn as time goes on that chicks must be fed and that feed costs money. Sometimes it is difficult to finance the venture during the time the chicks are developing and this leads to a practice of make-shift substitutions.

The food elements in a chick mash are placed there for a purpose. The birds must have protein, carbohydrates, fats, minerals and vitamins. An ample supply of pure water is needed at all times. The feeds comprising a chick's ration are not selected at random but are placed there for a purpose. Each food element has its special function to perform in the building of tissue, feathers, bone and the other vital necessities of proper development.

Scan Market Situation

Before Selling Broilers

Despite the fact that chickens gain weight most economically during the first two weeks of their lives, a poultryman may find more profit in holding the birds until they have reached the weight which brings the highest price, observes L. M. Black, extension poultryman at the New Jersey College of Agriculture, Rutgers university. Generally, the highest prices are paid for heavy, young birds, he says.

If feed costs were the only item to be considered in producing poultry meat, there would be no question as to the most profitable time to dispose of the birds, Mr. Black says, but broiler producers must be alert to seasonal price variations and temporary fluctuations caused by supply and demand.

A two-pound broiler may be produced easily on approximately seven pounds of feed. A roasting bird of four and a half pounds will require between 25 and 30 pounds of feed to reach such size, while only three and a half pounds of feed is required to produce a pound of broiler. A pound of gain during the first two weeks of a chick's life may be obtained on slightly more than a pound and a half of feed.

Guineas' Safety Alarms

Always alert and watchful, guinea fowls have a special value as danger alarms and safety leaders for other poultry, particularly the rattle-headed turkeys. H. L. Shrader of the United States Department of Agriculture suggests that turkey growers will do well to include a few eggs of guinea fowls with each incubator lot of turkey eggs. They have the same period of incubation. The guinea chick is brighter, more alert. It teaches the turkey poults how to find the feed hopper and the warm spots under the brooder. As the two grow older and range together, the young guinea sounds the first alarm when strange animals or predatory hawks appear. To see a few guineas in a large flock of turkeys reminds one of a motorcycle policeman weaving in and out in crowded traffic. Guinea fowl also give variety for the table, and many consider the gamey meat a great delicacy.

Artificial Breeding

Simplified methods for artificial breeding of poultry, which in tests produced higher fertility than natural mating, have been developed by poultry scientists of the United States Department of Agriculture. A 97 per cent fertility of eggs was obtained by these new methods as compared with an average of 85 per cent in the natural matings at the National Agricultural Research center, Beltsville, Md. Ordinarily, poultrymen provide a male for each 10 or 15 birds in their flocks.

Many Geese in Europe

Goose raising is an important industry in France, Germany, Poland and Lithuania. In Germany more goose meat is consumed per head than in any other country in the world. Flocks of geese are raised everywhere throughout the country, despite which immense numbers of the birds are imported from neighboring countries. Goose fattening establishments have been set up, and geese farms are general. Geese girls are common countryside sights.

Lesson for April 26

JESUS LOOKS AT WEALTH AND POVERTY

LESSON TEXT—Luke 16:19-31. GOLDEN TEXT—The rich and poor meet together: the Lord is the maker of them all.—Proverbs 22:2.

PRIMARY TOPIC—Jesus' Story of a Beggar Man.

JUNIOR TOPIC—Which Was the Rich Man?

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—What Money Cannot Buy.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—How Can We Make Our Social Order Christian?

The topic as given by the Lesson committee is hardly a fair statement. The supreme message is the presentation of contrasted lives and destinies as expressed through the accidents of wealth and poverty. Lazarus was not entitled to heaven because he was poor, neither did the rich man reach the place of torment because he was rich. In this lesson two worlds are unveiled before us, disclosing extremes of character and conditions of persons. In this world we see a rich man reveling in luxury and a poor man in sore affliction begging at the rich man's gate. In the other world we see the same men in reversed positions. These lives were intended to be representative.

I. The Contrasted Lives (vv. 19-21).

1. The rich man (v. 19). He seems to have lived in a mansion secluded from the common people. He was clothed in costly raiment. He was served the richest food that could be provided. His sin was selfishly to indulge his appetites without consideration for others.

2. The beggar (vv. 20, 21). He was laid at the rich man's gate with the hope of getting at least the crumbs from his table. The rich man gave him no consideration. The dogs of the street were more kind to him than the rich man. Though destitute and helpless, the man's name is most suggestive. "Lazarus" means "God is a help," indicating that a godly life shone through his poverty. Worldly condition is not a sure test of a man's position in the sight of God. All rich men are not wicked and selfish, neither are all poor men godly.

II. Their Contrasted Deaths and Burials (v. 22).

1. The beggar. He was found dead and his body was hurried off to a pauper's grave. No notice was taken of his death by the world. Doubtless the only loss to the world was that he was no longer to be seen at the rich man's gate.

2. The rich man. He also died. His gold could not bribe the messenger of death. Doubtless a costly funeral was held, attended by those who moved in his social class, the officiating priest pronouncing great eulogies over him.

III. Their Contrasted Destinies (v. 23).

1. The beggar. He was at once carried by the angels into Abraham's bosom. The souls of believers are especially cared for at the hour of death (Phil. 1:23). They go immediately to be with the Lord.

2. The rich man. Though he had an elaborate burial, he lifted up his eyes in hell being in torment. When the veil of futurity is lifted, we see the positions of these men are reversed. The poor man is in the company of just men made perfect because of his life of godliness on the earth, and the rich man is stripped of his purple and fine linen and cast into hell with all wicked men, because while on earth he lived only for selfish ends.

IV. The Reality and Fixedness of Life Beyond the Grave (vv. 24-31).

1. The cry for mercy (v. 24). Dives, which is the Latin name for "rich man," was now willing to claim relationship to Abraham. He was keenly conscious and the appetites which controlled him while on earth were still with him. Part of the torment of hell will be the cravings of appetite and lust with no means of their gratification.

2. Abraham's reply (v. 25). This reply cast the matter back upon the man's memory. He said, "Son, remember." The lashings of a guilty conscience will be most real in hell.

3. Their fixedness. Human destinies are fixed during this life. When one passes out of this life he enters into a condition unchangeable.

4. God's Word is the all-sufficient light (vv. 27-31). Dives now requested that Lazarus go on an errand of mercy to his brethren. He regarded the testimony of a spirit of more value than the Word of God. Many today are more willing to trust the rappings of a ghost than the sure Word of God. Abraham declared that God's Word is sufficient, that those who rejected Moses and the prophets would not repent though visited by one who had risen from the dead.

Hope

Every blade of grass, each leaf, each separate floret and petal, is an inscription speaking of Hope. Consider the grasses and the oaks, the swallows, the sweet blue butterfly—they are one and all a sign and token showing before our eyes earth made into life.—R. Jeffries.

A very inexpensive quilt to make, it's one you can afford to give a bride-to-be. The tulips can also be used on scarfs and pillows to make your bedroom linens match.

Pattern 1118 comes to you with complete, simple instructions for cutting, sewing and finishing, together with yardage chart, diagram of quilt to help arrange the blocks for single and double bed size, and a diagram of block which serves as a guide for placing the patches and suggests contrasting materials.

Send 15 cents in coins or stamps (coins preferred) to The Sewing Circle, Needlecraft Dept., 82 Eighth Ave., New York, N. Y.

THE WORLD AT ITS WORST

By GLUYAS WILLIAMS

Very Distant

It was a birthday party given by a wealthy young farmer, and one of the guests noticed a somewhat lonely looking and shabbily attired man in a corner of the room, and walked over to him.

"I was introduced to you," he said, "but I didn't catch your name."

"My name," replied the other, "is Burton."

"Oh, then you are a relative of our host?"

"Yes," was the reply. "I'm his cousin twenty thousand pounds removed."—Answers Magazine.

Who'd Be a Teacher?

Teacher was instructing the infant class in the story of Lot's flight, and said: "Lot was warned to take his wife and flee out of the city, which was about to be destroyed. Lot and his wife got safely away. Now, children, have you any questions to ask?"

At last a little boy ventured to inquire: "Please, teacher, what happened to the flea?"

THE FERRY-MORSE SEED BREEDING INSTITUTE

Devoted to improving and maintaining the quality of America's garden seeds.

Maybe you think it impossible to breed vegetable and flower seeds that know how to grow. Well, it isn't! For that's exactly what The Ferry-Morse Seed Breeding Institute is doing at its stations in Rochester, Mich., and Salinas, Cal.

Cucumbers eight inches long—no more, no less; solid red beets; carrots that are practically coreless; rust-resistant snapdragons. Just a few of our achievements!

Year-in, year-out, new strains, adapted to varying soil and climate conditions, are being developed... existing quality is being improved and protected. After thorough tests for germination and purity, progeny of the foundation stocks is offered for planting in your garden. You'll find them listed in your free copy of our Home Garden Catalog.

Look for the Ferry display in your local stores. Ferry-Morse Seed Co., Detroit and San Francisco.
